2. Citations and explanations:

The invention is a thin flexible wrap for securing about a blood vessel, the wrap being more elastic or stretchable at, near or along part of its sides than at, near or along its centre, providing strain relief from wrapped to unwrapped blood vessel.

No prior art of a thin flexible wrap for securing about a blood vessel was found to include strain relief from wrapped to unwrapped blood vessel by being more elastic or stretchable at, near or along part of its sides than at, near or along its centre.

The nearest prior art found was WO 1995005122 which provides varying rigidity and vein compression rate distributed along the length of the band and not from side to side through the centre of the band.
